Welcome to "The Kill on Old Mill"...our humble tribute to this festive season.

Things just haven't been quite right here since the old pumpkin farmer disappeared. We reckon he shouldn't have planted his crops so close to the old cemetery.....

The Kill on Old Mill started many years ago with Halloween revelers visiting our house and peering through the front windows, eager to get a glimpse at the dark and foggy living room graveyard. As years passed, and people's time on earth expired, we were forced to expand the cemetery into the front yard. We're not sure if it's the makeup of the soil, or events stricken from the recorded history of the area, but the cemetery expansion seems to have left a calling card for the undead. This year we face a new dilemma as the pumpkin patch in the garage seems to have been affected as well. Be wary when you visit, as you never know what might pop up.

So be sure to pay us a visit and help put the residents of Old Mill Cemetery to rest. We gladly accept cans and other non-perishable food donations for people and pets.
